External Entity

Data Flow Diagrams

- A graphical tool, useful for communicating with users, managers, and other personnel.
- Used to perform structured analysis to determine logical requirements.
- Useful for analyzing existing as well as proposed systems.
- Focus on the movement of data between external entities and processes, and between processes and data stores.
- A relatively simple technique to learn and use.

Why DFD ?

- Provides an overview of the system
- What data a system processes

Distribute Database System

- For example: in a banking system bank may implement their database on a different physical location rather than a single or in centralized manner. In banking system all computer may located at local branch office like jaipur, Amritsar. A network enable these branch office to communicate with each other, and DDBMS allow to access those data from another branch office.

3

Distribute Database System

- A distributed database is a collection of multiple, logically interrelated database distributed over a computer network.
- it is a collection of two or more database that are situated to other locations on the same network or on entirely different networks. some databases are stored in different multiple physical location or site and processing is distributed in different multiple nodes
