III year Botany

Solve the problems given below and bring the results tomorrow.

- Colour blindness is an example of sex linked character. Those who suffer from red green colour blindness cannot distinguish between red and green colour. The gene for this defect is located on X chromosome.
 - If a red green color blind male (XY) marries a normal female (XX), how many of the offspring will be red green colour blind ?
 - If a normal male (XY) marries a carrier female (XX), how many of the offspring will be red green colour blind ?
- Colour blind people often try to eat unripe bananas because they can't tell the difference between a green unripe banana and a yellow ripe banana. A male with this defect (XY) marries a defective female (XX), how many of the offsprings will become unable to eat ripe bananas?
