| 8           | From 27 th January to 1 st February 2014. | Social Work Practice | Tribal Camp                    | The tribal populations are is recognized as socially and economically vulnerable. Their lifestyles and food habits are different from that of their rural neighbors. They depend on minor forest produce and manual labour for livelihood. They are engulfed with superstitions and different socio-religious taboos; have poor awareness about cleanliness, limited or almost zero sanitation facility, suffer from poor health due to unhealthy and primitive life styles and demonstrate strong apathy towards any attempt of modernization. |
| 9           | 7 th February 2014                                   | Guest Lecture        | Environment Protection         | Social work has long been a profession committed to the person-in-environment focus. In the wake of current startling facts on environmental degradation, there has been a sharpening of this focus world over, with the ensuing practice termed as environmental social work; environmental social work assists humanity to create and sustain a biodiversity planetary ecosystem and does this by adapting existing social work methods to promote societal change.                                                                           |

| 14 | 30 th September 2014 | Awareness | Child Labour and Poster and Sticker Launch | Social work's historic commitment to human rights, to social justice and, to vulnerable populations makes child labor an area of great concern to the profession. Since that time, it is safe to say that a lot has indeed been done, but there remains work to be accomplished to ensure the safety and well-being of all children, across the globe, from every strata of society, and to provide them with the potential that childhood holds. We cannot help but envision the faces behind the figures of child labor and present some of the important milestones in the march toward eradicating child labor. |

A problem identified by the National HIV/AIDS Strategy is the high rates of male incarceration, which can result in gender imbalance in the local community, and higher chance of infection. Social workers also need to be aware of the special risks faced by women, as they may be unable to negotiate safer sexual practices due to the risk of violence. |

| 52 | 11 th December 2018 | Awareness program | World AIDS/HIV Day | There are other factors that social workers need to consider when trying to stem the rise of new infections. A problem identified by the National HIV/AIDS Strategy is the high rates of male incarceration, which can result in gender imbalance in the local community, and higher chance of infection. Social workers also need to be aware of the special risks faced by women, as they may be unable to negotiate safer sexual practices due to the risk of violence. |
